Plenary 1 - Beyond Healthcare to health

The nursing and midwifery health work force comprise almost 50% of the world's healthcare providers globally, yet we face severe shortfalls in an aging population. We must move from systems that are focused on disease to systems that place the person at the centre of care. Nurses are expert at being able to provide person-centred and innovative care delivery, while turning policy into practice and keeping safety at the forefront.

Nurses are key stakeholders in implementing and achieving real change. We wear many hats and have many roles in the provision of healthcare, some shared by other professions, but nursing is UNIQUE because of its scale and their strong connection with the people and the local communities which gives them a great deal of influence.

WHO is collaborating with the International Council of Nurses and the Nursing Now Campaign to produce the first ever State of the World's Nurses 2020 Report. This will provide a global picture of the nursing workforce using validated data and provide guidance for countries that want to optimize this most valuable resource.

Partner Symposium 1 - Increasing nursing competencies in the face of new challenges / Ampliando competencias enfermeras ante los nuevos retos.

The main aim of this session is to delineate the opportunities linked to the new challenges in the epidemiological patterns of disease. In this new scheme, nurses should get new competencies to contribute to improve patient safety, the quality of care and the efficiency of the health systems. In this framework, four interventions, from basic to advanced care, will be considered. The session will be ending analysing the situation of research in this field and it will be proposed threads of research to demonstrate the usefulness of getting these new competencies for nurses.

Sponsored Symposium 1 - Labour & education market analysis & National Health Workforce Accounts

This session will present two examples of initiatives that are generating data for countries to advance policy dialogue and drive investment in the health workforce. 1. The WHO's first-ever State of the World's Nursing report and the State of the World's Midwifery 2020 report will describe how the nursing and midwifery workforces will help deliver Universal Health coverage (UHC) and the Sustainable Development Goals. The data shared by countries - via national health workforce accounts - will support national policy dialogue and decision-making to address health priorities such as primary health care and UHC. 2. The World Bank is leading an analysis of the education and labour markets for nurses and midwives in the Eastern, Central and Southern Africa region to produce a comprehensive assessment that will support the expansion of health education and then nursing workforce in the region. This session will update participants on the status of the reports and how they can contribute.

ICN Policy & Advocacy Café 1: Disaster nursing: How prepared are we?

Since 2009, more than 2.6 billion people have been affected by natural phenomena such as earthquakes, tsunamis, landslide, heat waves, floods and severe cold weather events. These and other threats to public health such as infectious disease outbreaks, wars and societal conflicts and other disasters have led to mass casualties, often resulting in overwhelming the local health care providers and leading to subsequent and long term negative impacts on the health system. To help meet these and other challenges, the health workforce needs to strengthen its capacity and capability for emergency and disaster response. In this policy café, hear from disaster nursing experts (including our key note speaker), listen and explore, discuss and debate nursing's role in disaster management.

ICN Policy & Advocacy Café 2: Technology and Digital Health

The revolution required to advance the nursing profession and improve the health system: Nurses are the main frontline healthcare providers around the world. They are responsible 24 hours each day for continually identifying health issues, implementing and adjusting care needs and monitoring outcomes to achieve desired health outcomes. This is a data rich environment. With the right tools such as EHRs and terminologies, we now have the ability to capture large scale information for analysis thereby discovering knowledge to transform health care and health outcomes. Come and hear the success stories from Norway and Portugal as they have successfully implemented one of the most comprehensive nursing terminologies in the World: ICNP™ (International Classification for Nursing Practice).

Side meeting 1 - International Classification for Nursing Practice (ICNP) 2019 launch

This is an exciting time for nursing as globally we have seen a growing interest in nursing information and data. ICNP offers a tried-and-tested option for countries desiring to accurately capture and report on nursing data. ICNP classifies patient data and clinical activity in the domain of nursing and can be used for decision-making and policy development aimed at improving health status and health care delivery. ICNP can improve communication and statistical reporting practices across health services, enhancing quality and safety. ICNP can be used in electronic systems in conjunction with other WHO-FIC classifications, wherever care is provided. To support implementation, a number of subsets are available for select health priorities, including nursing outcome indicators, paediatric pain management, palliative care, and partnering with patients and families to promote adherence to treatment.

Nursing Leadership: Understanding Cross Cultural Considerations and Navigating Political Agendas

Leadership in nursing has been mainly developed based on the underlying assumptions of North American values, however, the increasingly global nature of healthcare requires different understanding and approaches. GNLI scholars in partnership with the AAANL will address two critical professional issues: the importance of cross-cultural knowledge in nursing leadership; and reconciling nursing leadership with the broader political health agenda. GNLI scholars will explore the changing nature of nursing leadership and how the GNLI program is preparing nurse leaders for now and into the future, recognising that nurses are involved in the broader health and political agenda, through their resource decision-making and commitment to addressing the causes of health inequalities. Causes, which are often historical, entrenched, culturally sensitive, and unforgiving on leaders who are unable to navigate complex political agendas. The AAANL will then focus on Asian women's leadership needs across three countries/regions (Hong Kong, Taiwan, and the U.S.), which will showcase the necessity of cross-cultural leadership to global health and well-being. This group will provide overall findings on women's leadership needs across the countries/regions and implications for future development of Asian women's leadership. The symposium will culminate with a facilitated panel discussion on nursing leadership taking questions from the audience.

Partner Symposium 2 - Nursing Workforce migration: regulation to ensure patient safety across borders

Today's global demographic shifts are shaping different debates regarding the interface of international nurse migration. The relationships between migration and globalization are undeniably dynamic realities impacting all regions of the globe. Continuous surges in the movement of people, advances in technology, changes in labour markets, and the movement of products across borders, all due to globalization, pose intricate challenges for regulatory sectors, health systems, and patient safety.

The issues confronting global nursing are presented via a discourse on the politics of nurse regulatory/licensure services. This symposium will introduce, compare, and contrast the regulatory models of four countries of destination—Canada, Italy, New Zealand, and the United States. While there are some divergences, these systems all aim to meet service needs, facilitate safe, orderly, and regular migration, guarantee professional competence, and ensure patient safety.

Partner Symposium 3 - Nursing in complex humanitarian contexts

MSF is a non-governmental organisation providing medical aid in complex humanitarian settings. We have 462 medical projects in 72 countries, with over 8,000 nursing care providers, making them the largest cadre of our medical workforce. Contexts include warzones, refugee camps, nomadic populations, urban slums, and search and rescue boats in the Mediterranean.

We will discuss the ongoing challenge of nurse shortages in South Sudan and Central African Republic, and solutions we have employed to bridge these gaps.

Sponsored Symposium 4 - The Nursing Profession and the UN Global compacts for Migration and on Refugees

Today, there are more than 258 million international migrants around the world and this number is only expected to grow due to population growth, increased globalization, rising inequality, climate change, among other factors. In September 2016, 193 UN Member States committed to developing a global strategy on issues related to migration and refugees around the globe. The Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration and the Global Compact on Refugees stem from the 2016 UN General Assembly Resolution 71/1, New York Declaration for Refugees and Migrants. This session will demonstrate how nurses can leverage their knowledge, experience, talents and compassion to advance the Global Concepts. This Symposium will cover the CGFNS project "Refugee Health Workforce - Deploying blockchain technology to recertify refugee healthcare workers", a project aimed at recertifying Syrian refugee nurses and health workers in Jordan.

Network 1 - The regulation network: key matters and challenges

Regulatory frameworks ensure that nurses are competent to be registered and maintain appropriate levels of competence to guarantee patient safety to the general public. In this framework, the ICN regulation network will discuss ways to respond to the new challenges in health in the 21st century such as different models of regulation worldwide and the new factors impacting on regulation.

Network 2 - Advanced Practice Globally - Where are we now and what does the future hold?"

An informative and interactive session on advanced practice will be facilitated by the ICN Nurse Practitioner/Advanced Practice Nurse Network. This will include a summary of the structure and ongoing work of the Network related to practice, education, health policy and research. Current research findings will illustrate how advanced practice is developing or being implemented globally. We will also explore the Network's role within ICN and how you can become involved with advanced practice developments. There will be opportunities to interact with the Network Core Steering Group who have extensive experience of advanced practice. We aim to showcase some case studies of advanced practice roles in addition to a brief introduction to the Network's sub groups, including the newly launched student group. This session is important for anyone wishing to understand and become more involved in advanced practice.

Partner Symposium 4 - Health of Nurses

The over 20 million nurses working worldwide contribute to the health and well-being of society. Considered in public opinion polls worldwide to be the most trusted professionals today, nurses play a crucial role in shaping and delivering health care. Their public credibility means they have a strong influence and impact on the population as well as key responsibilities in strategic planning and policy within international, national, and healthcare systems, services and programmes. However, nurses themselves have health issues in the same way as the general population but additionally as a result of their work with physical and mental pressures, shift work and lack of easy access to healthy food and exercise. C3 carried out a brief survey at the ICN Council of National Representatives (CNR) in Barcelona in May 2017, which focused on the involvement of national nurses associations in promoting and supporting nurses' own health. In addition, C3 did an investigation into obesity among nurses with a prevalence study, a food survey, focus groups, and the co-design of an app specifically for nurses.

Partner Symposium 5 - Nurse leadership as the lever for global health transformation

The current United Nation's Agenda for Sustainable Development, including targets for health, wellbeing, gender equity, and decent work, cannot be achieved without concerted and strategic efforts to maximize the effectiveness and contributions of the nursing and midwifery workforce. This session by Jhpiego builds a call for the international cultivation of nurse leaders as a critical next step to accelerate progress toward achieving the SDGs. A cofus will be placed on maximizing engagement between nurses and multi-disciplinary team members; building and leveraging nursing's broad technical diversity and frontline experience to drive change; and encouraging nurse innovation to ensure that clients and communities remain at the centre of care.

Advanced Practice Nursing: An expanding global phenomena

There is an increased interest in the development in advance practice nursing (APN) roles worldwide, especially as the United Nations (UN) seeks to implement the Sustainable Development Agenda. The ICN Advanced Practice Nursing Network (APNN) has completed intermittent global appraisals of APN regulatory status and practice. The development, implementation, and sustainability of APN roles depends on government recognition and regulation. Therefore, there is a need for ongoing data collection/index of APN policy, practice, and legislation.

Nurses Advancing Technology to Enable People to Live Their Best Lives

The convergence of fast moving mobile technologies, big data, and open platforms are enabling permission-free environments for nurses to invent, create, rapidly iterate, and innovate to address the global grand challenges facing human health and wellbeing. Indeed, with advances in computing and mobile devices, the use of technology has become prevalent in both nursing research and practice. This symposium will showcase how nurses are integrating technology into the clinical, operational, and research aspects of care and provide an open forum to discuss the new opportunities technology provides to improve health experiences and outcomes in communities across the globe.

Improving Interprofessional Collaborative Practice and Patient Outcomes Through Continuing Education

The symposium will provide an overview of strategies used to develop and sustain IPCE within nursing, medicine, and, in some cases, other health professions. Presenters with real-world experience in the university environment, academic health centers, global educational organizations, and in practice will demonstrate how IPCE focuses on meaningful and relevant problems or opportunities for improvement. Presenters will share perspectives and examples from the United States, Singapore, and the Middle East, Europe, and Asia and provide specific and successful strategies that have been implemented around the world.

Nurses and midwives are fundamental to achieving health for all in sub-Saharan Africa

The symposium will demonstrate the contribution of nurses in improving client outcomes through health promotion, disease prevention, care and treatment services in South Africa, Tanzania, Côte d'Ivoire and Lesotho. A brief presentation by each of the presenters will be followed by a facilitated discussion on how people-centred care contributes to improved outcomes and achieving health for all. Approaches to addressing health and illness from an age and gender lens in sub-Saharan Africa will be presented in the context of UHC, which necessitates skilled staff providing education, prevention, care and treatment services relevant to the population being served.

ICN Policy & Advocacy Café 7: Creating a cohesive and consistent approach to Advanced Practice Nursing

Come and have a front row seat at one of this year's most highly anticipated documents on nursing practice. It has been 17 years since ICN released its last official position on Advanced Practice Nursing. This work has been cited in thousands of articles and reports and has influenced health policy around the world. This year ICN will release new and updated guidelines on Advanced Practice Nursing. This work will be a sentinel moment for Advanced Practice Nursing and will have a profound effect on health policies and systems. Come and hear from the leaders responsible for progressing this vitally important work.

Main Session 8

In a world of ever-changing uncertainties related to geopolitical interconnect challenges and increased health professional connections, regulatory bodies are in the midst of an incessant transformation. In well-functioning health system, regulatory processes ensure that nurses are competent to be registered, maintain appropriate levels of competence and guarantee patient safety to the general public. In this framework, this session will focus on current regulatory reforms worldwide and suggest ways to respond to these challenges in health as we face a growing mobility of professionals, an increasing ageing of populations, new emerging technologies and regulatory challenges with more nurse employed in advanced practice roles. In response to these tasks, ICN is more and more committed to developing global strategies to engage regulators in tackling these demands.
