IFLA's Digital Humanities/Digital Scholarship Special Interest Group (SIG) invites you to join us for a lively session as we explore the transforming worldview of Digital Humanities and Digital Scholarship. At this year's IFLA WLIC in Kuala Lumpur, the DH/DS SIG will host a program titled "The Transforming Digital Scholarship Model - From Service Provider to Interdisciplinary Partner." The 2-hour program will feature lightning talks with speakers from five continents (Africa, Asia, Europe, Latin America and North America). It will capture emerging global development trends of DH/DS practices in library and information services settings, with particular attention given to new trends that elevate a library-based DH/DS center from a service unit to be recognized as an academic and research unit in a higher education environment. This session will be interactive, providing an excellent opportunity for active participation from the audience in a moderated discussion with the five global panelists.

Session 091, Motors of Change: Changing Ourselves to Change Our World - IFLA President's Session (SI)

Libraries – by providing meaningful access to information to all – are motors of change. Yet to fulfil this role into the future, libraries themselves need to be ready not just to adapt, but to stay ahead of trends. IFLA is working to make this possible by building a united library field, better able to work together to face the challenges of globalisation, and turn them into opportunities to serve our users. In the second phase of the Global Vision, IFLA is focusing on actions – clear, new ideas for what we can do ourselves, and with partners, to achieve our goals. Success will depend on new ways of thinking, on changes in mindset. The President's Session at the 2018 World Library and Information Congress will therefore look at what it takes to change mindsets and mobilise, to change ourselves in order to better change our world. >>>>> Watch recorded Session

Metadata is a valuable and strategic asset, but the changing role of the metadata specialist is not clear. Automated processes and new technical possibilities like linked data poses opportunities for the profession, but can also sometimes be perceived as a threat. It has been described as necessary to "reposition" the role of the bibliographic expert. Welcome to take part in a future-oriented discussion, inspired by different presentations/case stories!

Session 106, Continuing Professional Development and Workplace Learning - Coaching Sessions

The session offers career and professional development coaching for the individual and is an initiative from the Continuing Professional Development and Workplace Learning (CPDWL) section. All WLIC delegates are welcome to join the coaching session. The set up will be a drop-in session where the participants can choose between different areas. The coaches covers a wide variety of coaching areas within professional development. The coaching will focus on one individual or a small group of individuals. Each coaching interaction will last approximately 15-30 minutes. The focus of the coaching will be to help develop the individual's career and professional development and/or develop the individual's understanding of how involvement in the work of IFLA can help the individual's career and professional development. Societal trends, such as increased globalization, urbanization, and digitalization, are placing new demands on the library and information sector. To ensure that library staff and information professionals are prepared to adapt to these changes, it is imperative for associations and institutions to be 'learning organizations' and develop their staff by providing opportunities for continuing professional development and training in the workplace. The individual also needs to take responsibility for her or his own career planning and development. The IFLA Guidelines for Continuing Professional Development: Principles and Best Practices state: "The individual library and information professional is primarily responsible for pursuing ongoing learning that constantly improves knowledge and skills."

Session 105a, Wikipedia Update: What's Going On, and How Can You Get Involved?

There's strong potential for collaboration between Wikipedia and libraries, as highlighted in the opportunities papers presented at WLIC 2016. The potential has only grown in the last two years, with highlights such as #1Lib1Ref, but also ongoing projects around data, editathons, and teaching information literacy. The Wikipedia update at WLIC 2018 is an opportunity to hear the latest about what the broader Wikimedia movement is focusing on, with a new strategy and goals. It will introduce the WikiData project, as well as broader work on GLAM (Galleries, Libraries, Archives Museums) and other initiatives of interest. With a specific focus on the work of the Malaysian chapter, it will also be a chance to learn how librarians can get active on the ground.

Session 121a, WikiData and Libraries: An Introduction

Wikidata is a free and open knowledge base that can be read and edited by both humans and machines. Wikidata acts as central storage for the structured data of its Wikimedia sister projects including Wikipedia. Beyond Wikimedia projects, Wikidata also provides support to many other sites and services, including the Google Knowledge Graph. It is also relevant to many developing and emerging projects in the library descriptive landscape. In our linked data future, Wikidata may play an important role as a place to find and store metadata and identifiers. This workshop will be of interest to metadata libraries, digital library developers, those interested in linked data and identifiers, and those tracking emerging trends in librarianship.

Session 123, Intellectual Freedom in a Polarised World - Freedom of Access to Information and Freedom of Expression (FAIFE) Advisory Committee (SI)

In many national contexts, citizens are seen to be either "with the government or against it," leaving little opportunity to freely and safely express more nuanced views of current social, political or economic issues. While notable authoritarian regimes quite transparently monitor and limit societal discussion, others, ostensibly democratic, may work in practice to blunt potentially unfavourable social commentary on the pretence of defending political stability or public morality. IFLA's Freedom of Access to Information and Freedom of Expression (FAIFE) Advisory Committee explores this phenomenon--and the potential role of civil society and information professionals in advancing freedom of expression--through the experience and insights of an NGO leaders, an academic public intellectual, and an officer of UNESCO. >>>>> Watch recorded Session

Session 124, Fragile! Careful Handling Required: Manuscript housing, conservation and metadata documentation for access - Strategic Programme on Preservation and Conservation (PAC) with Rare Books and Special Collections (SI)

In 2017, an IFLA workshop on developing metadata standards for palm leaf manuscripts highlighted the importance of taking a more holistic approach to these rare, and often fragile works. Too often, the tools and guidance available to the library community is ill suited to manuscripts, as opposed to books or other works. What experience can we share, and how can we overcome this challenge? The Strategic Programme on Preservation and Conservation is therefore focusing its 2018 WLIC session on the preservation and storage of, as well as metadata for documentation and access to, both manuscripts in general, and palm leaf manuscripts in particular. Within the session, there will be an update on work on developing metadata standards for palm leaf manuscripts, and a series of presentations on broader work to ensure the sustainability and accessibility of manuscripts.

Session 125, UNESCO Session - Libraries and a Universal Internet

Delivering an Internet that works for everyone is more than just about connectivity. In its work on Internet Universality, UNESCO has established four principles which should underpin the spread and development of the web – that it should be rights based, open, accessible, and subject to multi-stakeholder governance (ROAM). Over the past year and a half, UNESCO has built on these principles by defining a set of indicators of Internet Universality, organised according to the ROAM principles above, as well as cross-cutting factors. This session will explore the conclusions to which UNESCO has come, their relevance to library activities and values, and how the application of the indicator framework can work for libraries. A second part of the session will look at practical efforts by libraries to build the connectivity necessary to give people access, notably in situations where reliable connections are simply not available.

Session 136, Plenary session - Innovating Malaysia's Social Sector (SI)

Abstract: Social Innovation is a dynamic form of initiative to deal with social issues in a country. Social Innovation encourages individuals, communities, organisations and governments to continually explore newer and better ways to tackle social issues. One such innovative model was introduced by Malaysia Innovation Agency or Agensi Inovasi Malaysia, when they discovered that the government and the relevant parties involved have to incur a substantial sum of money to manage and to tackle each social issue. Social Progress Assessment, also known as SPA, represents the first step for Malaysia to develop its own social financing model. In this context, SPA calculates the costs incurred by different ministries and agencies to address social issues, such as improving the quality of living and access to clean water in underprivileged communities. These costs can be used as social indicators to guide measurement of social impact.

Session 140, To Have and not to Hold: The End of Ownership - Copyright and other Legal Matters (CLM) and Freedom of Access to Information and Freedom of Expression (FAIFE) Advisory Committee

The shift from buying physical library media to licensing digital content has profound impacts on the way libraries acquire and give access to content. From e-books that can disappear at the whim (or the mistake) of the owners of a server far away, to the limits on sharing and archiving imposed by some contracts. From the potential monitoring of reader behaviour, to the criminalisation of those who simply want to improve user experience. The dominance of digital media in information provision has both broadened the field of information to which we have access, but potentially made it shallower in terms of the use that libraries, and their users, can make of it. The joint CLM-FAIFE session will look at the question of the end of ownership from a legal and an ethical point of view, drawing on the experience and knowledge of the two communities.

Session 142, Librarian Fashion: What does the way we dress say about us? - New Professionals, Management of Library Associations and Public Libraries

Have you ever made a quick judgement about someone because of what they're wearing? Sure, we have all done it. Does this mean that the way we dress at work influences how we are perceived and categorized in society? The topic of Librarian Fashion opens a myriad of questions: Should librarians wear a uniform? Can we wear tattoos? Should we dress with dignity – and what does dignity mean? What about piercings? Jewels? Religious or political symbols? Does it depend on a personal choice, on the country we live in, or on the position we hold in the library? Should a library director dress like a librarian or like a director? Do you believe in enclotted cognition?

Session 147a, The Library of the Future - Right Now - PressReader

There's been a big change in the way people discover all kinds of content. Yes, even library patrons. Libraries must transform their business model to meet changes in human behavior, or get left behind. Mark will outline three key things that libraries can learn from companies like Netflix and Spotify to improve the patron experience. They learned long ago that while people are interested in content, it's the way content is discovered that's important. It's time libraries followed suit.

Session 152, Start-up Meeting - Library Publishing Special Interest Group

Library Publishing, in an increasing number of mostly electronic forms and formats, has been rapidly on the rise over this decade. Most of this activity is driven by one or likely more priorities that are so well expressed in IFLA's Global Vision Highlights and Opportunities: (1) Commitment to Equal and Free Access; (3) Serving our Communities; (4) Embracing Digital Innovation; and (9) Guardians of the Memory of the World. Last year we sought expressions of interest for an IFLA Special Interest Group and in 2018 would like to follow this up with a discussion on the priority areas and issues, should the Group be approved. What should be the role of this group and how can libraries be helpful to each other if they are or plan to be active in this area? If you (or your institution) are interested in this emerging area of library practice, please join us to discuss your highest priorities, interests, and questions. IFLA brings a special opportunity to meet local needs, by sharing and cross-pollinating activities, tools, and best practices on a global basis. Let's talk about specifically about how the IFLA environment can advance our publishing mission -- and let's make a plan to move ahead!

Session 170, Association Members Meeting

Libraries – by providing meaningful access to information to all – are motors of change. Yet to fulfil this role into the future, libraries themselves need to be ready not just to adapt, but to stay ahead of trends. IFLA is working to make this possible by building a united library field, better able to work together to face the challenges of globalisation, and turn them into opportunities to serve our users. In the second phase of the Global Vision, IFLA is focusing on actions – clear, new ideas for what we can do ourselves, and with partners, to achieve our goals. Success will depend on new ways of thinking, on changes in mindset. The President's Session at the 2018 World Library and Information Congress will therefore look at what it takes to change mindsets and mobilise, to change ourselves in order to better change our world.

Session 185, Investing in the Library Workforce: Case Studies in the Effective Use of the 2016 IFLA Guidelines for Continuing Professional Development - Continuing Professional Development and Workplace Learning

The 2016 IFLA Guidelines for Continuing Professional Development set out clear principles for supporting the library's most valuable asset - its staff. The Guidelines position continuing professional development as a shared responsibility: The individual staff member is responsible for their own learning - but they share that responsibility with their employers, their professional associations and their educational institution. This session will involve a blending of information and discussion. Following a brief overview of the guidelines themselves, three speakers (coming from a variety of geographic areas and organization types) will present short case studies illustrating their experiences using the guidelines in their institutions. Following that, the audience will be given an opportunity to engage in small groups to discuss current and best practices for using the Guidelines. The results from these small group discussions will be shared back with the larger group.

Session 208, Evidence for Global and Disaster Health (E4GDH) Special Interest Group

Librarians and their services have the potential to play an enhanced, pivotal role in the production, organisation, assessment and deployment of evidence concerning global and disaster health including disaster preparedness and risk reduction. Why attend this meeting? The session will build on IFLA's response to the Sendai Framework for Disaster Risk Reduction. This raised awareness of the role of libraries as key agents in the delivery of reliable health and related information in times of stress and catastrophe; also as potential providers of a secondary emergency service for their communities such as a safe neutral space. Welcome and opening remarks will be made by Professor Virginia Murray, Consultant in Global Disaster Risk Reduction at Public Health England. Recommendations from the pre-congress Satellite Meeting will be shared, with small group discussions on the roles that librarians can play, and to ensure wide input to the SIG Action Plan and priorities for 2018/19.

Session 211, General Assembly (SI)

The General Assembly is the highest governance level of the Federation and its key function is to determine the purposes and values of the Federation as a whole. That is both a privilege and a responsibility and can only be achieved through Member participation: All IFLA Members or their representatives are entitled to speak at the General Assembly and have a right to vote if quorum is reached. Voting can't take place unless quorum is established, so it is crucial that all eligible members (or their sanctioned representatives) who are in Kuala Lumpur participate in this session. Non-voting members are also encouraged to attend, as it is an opportunity to show IFLA's commitment to transparency and a "bottom-up" democratic process of governance. Don't miss out! The General Assembly reconvenes at the Closing Session, where official IFLA Awards (Honours and Premier Awards, Dynamic Unit Impact Award and Best Poster) will be presented. Agenda: 1. Opening by the President, Glòria Pérez-Salmerón 2. Appointment of Tellers 3. Establishment of a Quorum 4. Adoption of the Agenda 5. Minutes of the previous meeting, held in Wrocław, Poland, 23 and 24 August 2017 6. In memoriam of those members who have died during the past year 7. Presentation of the Report of the President 8. Presentation of IFLA's Annual Report by the Secretary General 9. Presentation of the Annual Accounts by the Treasurer 10. Session 217, What's Up with eLending? - eLending Working Party with Public Libraries (SI)

In the 5 years since the last major session at WLIC, we have seen talk of the death of the physical books replaced by talk of the death of the eBook (both unsubstantiated), evolution in licensing practices and the emergence of library created platforms, and the first e-Public Lending Right scheme established. While it may be too soon to talk about the maturity of eLending, it is time to explore recent trends and questions faced by libraries which are already eLending, or are looking to do so. This session, coordinated by IFLA's Working Group on eLending will share the latest research on the impact of eLending on sales and readership, and the latest practical steps to make eLending work for libraries and their users. >>>> Watch recorded Session

Session 231, IFLA Cultural Heritage in the Community: Assessing the Impact of Digital Libraries - IFLA HQ

Libraries, alongside other cultural heritage institutions, are increasingly investing in web presence in order to broaden access to their collections. Digital libraries have emerged as platforms hosting (or at least giving access to) collections for all, copyright and connectivity permitting. Such initiatives have been recognised by IFLA in its vision on digital libraries as a means of 'offering the broadest and most complete service possible', and in a joint manifesto with UNESCO as a 'new channel to the universe of knowledge and information, connecting cultures across geographical and social boundaries'. This session will explore recent efforts to assess what impact digital libraries are having, over and above visitor numbers. With increasing pressure on libraries in many fields to show the value of their work, such efforts can provide useful arguments both for specific initiatives, and for libraries as a whole.

Session 234, Advocacy 101: Every librarian an advocate! - Library Development Programme (LDP) Advisory Committee

From outreach with members of our communities and local politicians, to engagement at the United Nations, library advocacy can take many forms, but has a single goal: to shape the environment in which libraries exist and work, in order to enable our field to realise its potential to build literate, informed and participatory societies. This session will explore the concept of advocacy for libraries, providing great examples both of what is already being done, and the potential that lies before the library field, from the local to the global levels. And, in the light of the opportunity identified in the IFLA Global Vision Summary report, it will open up a inclusive discussion about ideas for action to make Every Librarian an Advocate.
